

The Infamous Word

The Infamous Blog of the Infamous Stringdusters

Nor'Easter Tour starts in 16 days. Ready or not, here we come...

+

Live, Free: Dusters @ Albino Skunk last weekend

Dedicated tapers have already uploaded the show from last weekend at Albino Skunk. I haven't heard it, and we were partying pretty hard, but this just might be the greatest 'Dusters set ever. No setlist listed yet, so get on there and help them figure it out.

+

Belleville Outfit and the crowd at Albino Skunk.

+

Shannon Whitworth

is fabulous. Watched her and her band ramble through a beautiful set last night at the Albino Skunk Festival. The sound is like moody, indie-roots country. Upright bass keeps it grounded but pedal steel, telecaster and sultry vocals allow the music to soar. She's also managed to continually write songs that make me feel something; songs that sound like what they say; songs that make me put down the 'shine and go streaking from the backstage to the front at the first hint of melody. There's not a lot of music that makes me do that these days. Humble, down-to-earth, calm, funny and beautiful; it's small wonder everyone seems to have a crush on Shannon.

www.shannonwhitworth.net

±

Two Man Gentleman Band

Last night we descended on The Pour House in Charleston, SC. We didn't go on until 11pm so we occupied ourselves at the Cuban place next door. Tiny cups of devastating coffee and massive plates of Cuban pork and rice & beans. Fantastic. Two Man Gentleman Band went on at 10. These guys are awesome. Unique, entertaining, funny, drinking songs and musical... they've got it all. Check these guys out, it's a great show. We're hoping we can do more shows with these guys down the road.

Headed up into NC tonight then the Albino Skunk scene tomorrow.

±

Need I say more?

±

Cresty's ripe for the pickin'

±